

Forecast For East Midlands
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 0400 on Sunday 16 May 2021

++ Valid for broadcast between 0600 and 1800

Headline:

Sunday, some sunny spells, heavy afternoon showers developing, perhaps thundery.

Today:

Bright or sunny spells this morning but heavy showers developing from late morning, these becoming locally thundery by afternoon. The showers then gradually become isolated again through this evening. Maximum temperature 16 deg C (61 deg F).

Tonight:

Residual showers gradually decay to leave mostly dry conditions overnight. Variable cloud amounts and some patchy low cloud forming, with generally light winds. Minimum temperature 7 deg C (45 deg F).

Monday:

Bright or sunny spells but occasional heavy showers developing by afternoon, these locally thundery. The showers then slowly decay through the evening. Winds generally light. Maximum temperature 15 deg C (59 deg F).

Outlook for Tuesday to Thursday:

Tuesday and Wednesday, sunny spells and further showers, still locally heavy at first but lighter by Wednesday. Thursday, bright morning but cloud, some rain and freshening winds likely later.

(C) Crown Copyright 2021. Published by the Met Office.